We thank our friends and sponsors for their generous support to the Institute for Law and Finance.
Dear Members and Friends,

Our first year has been a rewarding success. We want to thank you all for making it possible.

It would not have been possible without you, the students. Your intellectual eagerness, the great diversity of your cultural backgrounds, as well as your personalities, have given the Institute for Law and Finance its spirit.

It would not have been possible without you, the lecturers. You have given your expertise and your valuable time to us and to our students. Your presence and intellectual contribution have been an invaluable source of stimulation.

It would not have been possible without you, our sponsors. Generously, you have shared your expertise with the ILF. You have provided the ILF with its lecturers, internships and scholarships for students, as well as a good deal of our funding.

The opening of the ILF was made possible by the Johann Wolfgang Goethe University’s initial endowment. The Dresdner Bank AG agreed to sponsor a permanent chair for the ILF’s Director. Commerzbank AG set up a fund that will allow the ILF to invite leading international academics to act as guest professors for the ILF over the next six years. Deutsche Bank through its Foundation fund provided tuition scholarships and funding for guest lectures. Stiftung Eurohypo provided a generous endowment to build up and maintain the collection of books in ILF’s library. The Federal Ministry of Finance hosted a series of lectures at the ILF on issues of financial market policy, attended by students, academics, and members of the financial community, which will be continued in the next academic year.

While we cannot name all here, there were many others whose equally important contributions in time and energy helped to launch the ILF. These included leading international law firms, auditing companies and corporate consulting firms, investment banks and public institutions.

We thank you all.

The Founding of the Institute for Law and Finance

The University, with generous financial support from Dresdner Bank and other private sponsors, the ILF was able to quickly begin official operation. By October 14, 2002, the ILF was ready to open its doors to the class of 2003.

Selecting a Manager; Procuring Facilities

In March 2002, the ILF appointed Dr. Rima Dapous as its first Managing Director. Dr. Dapous, who holds a PhD from Oxford University, resided in England for 12 years where she gained extensive experience in university administration. At the time of her appointment, she was serving as an Assistant to University President Prof. Steinberg. Dr. Dapous appointed Ms. Christina Hagernag, who had accumulated extensive administrative experience in media and marketing, as her assistant.

Dr. Dapous turned to setting up the Institute’s physical facility. Her first task was to find a suitable location in which to house the ILF. The University generously provided an Historical, Jugendstil Villa located at Georg-Voigt Str. 4 on the Bockenheimer Campus of the University, to house the ILF temporarily. This Villa will serve as home to the Institute until the construction of a new House of Finance, which will house, inter alia, both the ILF and the Center for Financial Studies.

In mid-2002, the Villa was extensively renovated. The work included internal modernization of the seminar room, lounge, library and office spaces, and the outfitting of the building with a new computer network linked to the University’s high-speed mainframe. The renovation work proceeded at a high clip and was completed by September 5, 2002. The impressive press library of the University’s AIfW, (Institut für Auslands- und Internationales Wirtschaftsrecht), with its collection of over 100,000 volumes covering the law of most major jurisdictions, was in part relocated into the renovated ILF Villa, where it will form the core of the new ILF library.

Now that it had an address, the new Institute also required a recognizable identity. With the help of professional advisors, Dr. Dapous created an ILF Corporate Identity (Logo) and drafted an ILF Brochure and other marketing material. The ILF launched its own Internet website in May 2002, at www.ilf-frankfurt.de, to provide information on the Institute to potential students and the public at large.

The press staff of various ILF sponsors provided valuable assistance to introduce the ILF to the international academic and business community. Major publications also commented on the creation of the ILF. This was not limited to Dr. Dapous’s alma mater, Kölner Zeitschrift für deutsches Recht, but also included the Financial Times and The Wall Street Journal, which both printed articles in June 2002.

Selecting a Director

On October 1, 2002, Prof. Dr. Andreas Cahn was officially installed as the first Director of the Institute for Law and Finance. Prof. Cahn came to Frankfurt from the University of Mannheim, where he held a professorship in Civil Law, Commerce Law and Corporate Law between 1996 and 2002. Andreas Cahn was born in Frankfurt in 1959. After spending part of his high school education in the United States, he began to study law at the University of Frankfurt in 1980. After completing his first and second state exams in law, Cahn went to San Francisco, California, where he completed a Master of Laws (LL.M.) degree at the University of California, Berkeley.

Upon returning from Berkeley, Andreas Cahn worked briefly in the legal department of DB Bank (today DZ Bank AG), and then served seven years as a research assistant for Prof. Hans-Joachim Mertens at the University of Frankfurt’s AIfW. During this period, he completed his post-doctoral requirements to become a university lecturer with a thesis on capital requirements in corporate groups (Kapitalanforderungen im Konzern), which was published in 1998.

Establishing the ILF Governing Bodies

The Institute’s primary governing bodies are its Executive Committee, its Board of Trustees and its Donors’ Committee. The ILF Executive Committee is composed of three Frankfurt law professors and is responsible for the management of the foundation. The current Executive Committee members are Prof. Andreas Cahn, Prof. Dr. Theodor Baums, and Prof. Manfred Wandt.

The Institute’s Board of Trustees is composed of representatives of the ILF’s donors and sponsors, and has the task of advising the Executive Committee.

The ILF’s Donors’ Committee is also composed of representatives of the ILF’s donors and sponsors, and primarily advises the Executive Committee and the Board of Trustees of the ILF.

Members of the ILF Board of Trustees (as of November 2003):
- Prof. Bernd Fahrholz, Chairman, Board of Trustees of ILF

In early 2001, the President of Johann Wolfgang Goethe University, Prof. Rudolf Steinberg, and the Director of the University’s institute for Banking Law, Prof. Theodor Baums, began exploring the idea of creating a new institute that would serve as a focus for teaching and discussing the law, regulation and economics of international finance. The concrete fruit of their discussions was a plan to set up an institute in Frankfurt in association with the University, yet in the somewhat more independent and flexible form of a private, non-profit foundation that would focus on international and comparative aspects of law and finance. The faculty of Law and Economics would work together to form the new institute. The student body would be small yet nationally diverse. Lectures and examinations would be given in English both to provide students with extensive experience in the current language of international commerce and to allow participation by students from the greatest number of nations.

In this way, a concrete plan emerged to create an Institute, the “Institute for Law and Finance” or “ILF”. The ILF would be a public-private partnership. Dresdner Bank AG supported the establishment of the Institute with a € 2.5 million endowment from the bank’s special “Horizonte” Fund, which is administered by the Siftverband für die Deutsche Wirtschaft. The annual earnings from the endowment fund were made available for the creation and maintenance of the ILF, including the funding of a Foundation Professor. In late 2001, a steering committee was set up to create the ILF under the co-chairmanship of Prof. Steinberg, representing the University, and Prof. Bernd Fahrholz, representing Dresdner Bank (Dresdner Bank-AG). The steering committee also included the Dean of University’s Law Faculty, Prof. Helmut Kohl (beginning in 2002 Prof. Ingwer Eben), Notar Prof. Wolfdieter of the Law Faculty and the law firm Bader & Almenante, Prof. Friedrich Kübbel, an emeritus member of the Law Faculty and counsel to the law firm Clifford Chance Pundes, Dr. Ronald Schömer of Deutsche Bank, Erwin Nieropa, Hans-Peter Schellen, Bernd Fahrholz of the European Central Bank, Dieter Haferkamp of the Deutsche Bundesbank, and Dr. Wolfdieter Klink, President of the Frankfurt Chamber of Industry and Commerce, Industrie- und Handelskammer.

On November 19, 2002, Prof. Fahrholz was awarded the title of Honorary Senator (Ehrensenator) of Johann Wolfgang Goethe University. Among the achievements for which he was awarded the honor were efforts in helping to found the ILF. In addition, the steering committee members resigned from the Frankfurt legal and financial community were awarded the Meda of the Johann Wolfgang Goethe University for their exemplary contributions in establishing the ILF.

In an official ceremony, the awards were presented by University President, Prof. Steinberg to: Prof. Fahrholz, Dr. Wolfdieter Haferkamp, Dr. Wolfdieter Klink, Erwin Nieropa, Hans-Peter Schellen, Dr. Ronald Schömer and Bernhard Walter, former CEO of Dresdner Bank, who was involved in the initial phase of creation of the ILF.

On April 10, 2002, the ILF was established as a private, non-profit foundation (Stiftung Bürgerlichen Rechts) with the official approval of the Hesse Foundation Board. On April 10, 2002, the ILF was ready to open its doors to the class of 2003.

At this point in time, the ILF was ready to start the search for an Executive Director.

Recruiting Lecturers

Early in the process of founding the Institute, the Steering Committee began the formidable task of recruiting a high quality teaching staff from academia and the financial community. The Steering Committee contacted qualified university colleagues and known experts in fields that would be included in the ILF curriculum. The response to these inquiries was positive. A growing circle of qualified professionals soon offered to bring their expertise to the ILF. Many well-known professionals, with the support of their firms, agreed to contribute valuable time and knowledge to the Institute.

The Institute was fortunate enough to receive commitments from professionals who had worked to shape some of the most important legal activity recently affecting finance in Europe, including the creation of the European Central Bank, the introduction of the euro, the creation of innovative multinational structures such as Daimler-Chrysler, and issues of debt and equity securities denominated in euro and distributed world-wide.

The ILF was also able to receive teaching commitments from high quality scholars in the University’s Department of Business and Economics, including Prof. Dr. Jan-Peter Krahnen, Prof. Dr. Raimond Maurer, Prof. Dr. Christian Schlag, Prof. Dr. Reinhardt Schmidt, Prof. Dr. Paul Bernd Spahn, and Prof. Dr. Mark Wahrenburg.

With its building renovated and furnished, and its administrative and academic teams in place, the ILF was ready to welcome its first class of students. On October 14, 2002, in a festive ceremony held in the new Westend Campus of the University, some 400 invited guests heard a podium presentation on the ILF with the theme, “A Public-Private Partnership of Business and Academia.” Speakers included Hessian Premier Dr. Roland Koch, Frankfurt Mayor Petra Roth, University President Prof. Rudolf Steinberg, and Dresdner Bank Chairman Prof. Bernd Fahrholz.

The ILF’s first student class was composed of 28 students from 18 different countries. This diverse group met the ILF’s goal of creating a truly international academy designed to attract highly qualified professionals from around the world. Countries represented in the first class included Germany (7 students), Belgium, China, Estonia, Italy, Russia (each with 2 students), Turkey, Mexico, Chile, Bulgaria, Poland, Lithuania, Ukraine, and the United States and France (each with 1 student).

The ILF in the Media

The ILF has also enjoyed extensive coverage in a number of German and international publications. These include the Frankfurter Allgemeine Zeitung, the Frankfurter Rundschau, the Financial Times Deutschland, Die Bank, Finanz Magazin (Switzerland/Austria), the German Law Journal, Wirtschaftswoche, and the Financial Times.

Accreditation

On March 7, 2003, the ILF Program was accredited by the competent German accreditation authority, Zentrale Evaluations- und Akkreditierungsagentur Hannover (ZEvA). The ZEvA is a member of the European Network for Quality Assurance in Higher Education, ENQA, and participates in their joint Quality Initiative (QI), which has developed evaluation criteria for Bachelors and Masters Degree study on a European level. The ZEvA accreditation is based on internationally accepted standards of accreditation.

The educational background and professional experience of the first student body was also richly diverse. Students held MBAs and LL.B.s, had completed postgraduate study in finance, had experience in investment banks, central banks, national securities regulatory bodies and private law practice. The institutions that our students had previously attended included Harvard University, the Russian Academy of Economics, Shanghai University, and Tufts University. The students ranged in age from their mid-20’s to their mid-40’s.

The ZEvA accreditation is based on internationally accepted standards of accreditation.
In addition to educating post-graduate students, the ILF is also designed to serve as a forum for discussing ideas affecting law and finance. During the 2002/2003 academic year, the ILF hosted alone and with partners, a number of successful conferences and lectures addressing financial, regulatory and corporate matters. On March 6, 2003, the ILF hosted a conference sponsored by Dresdner Bank entitled "The Future of Frankfurt as a Financial Center" and attended by more than 300 prominent business leaders, university faculty, and members of the financial and business community. The conference provoked a lively debate between five of Germany's leading experts on financial issues with journalists representing major newspapers and broadcasters in attendance.

Among the prominent speakers were University President Professor Rudolf Steinberg, who served as chairman of this year's international financial center. Professor Steinberg pointed out how the creation of the ILF continues this tradition as a major, positive development in Frankfurt's educational infrastructure for financial issues. German Minister of Finance Hans Eichel used the occasion to unveil details of the Government's proposed 2006 Financial Market Promotion Act. Dresdner Bank Chairman Prof. Bernd Fahlhofer also introduced private-sector proposals to strengthen Frankfurt's standing as a leading financial center.

Other podium speakers included Mr. Kitney & Co. director Frank Wallach of Hengeler Mueller, who contributed to a lively debate on the current challenges that such funds present. The conference also played an important role in arming the concerns related to hedge funds while such important jurisdictions as Germany, the United Kingdom, and the United States contemplate and prepare the introduction of new hedge fund legislation.

ILF Director Prof. Andreas Cahn and DAI Chairman Prof. Rüdiger von Rosen introduced the keynote and outlined developments in the German financial markets and their regulation. UBS/Waldbrodt division head Alexander Ineichen explained the nature of hedge funds and their advantages for investors. Columbia University’s Prof. Franklin Edwards set forth the specific risks that hedge funds present and outlined their ideas for their regulation. UK Financial Services Authority director Ashley Krusov described the risks in selling hedge fund products to individual investors and sketched the UK regulatory framework for hedge funds. Sieben & Pirminson partner Maria Cahnack explained how and why U.S. regulatory authorities are currently "waking up" to hedge funds. Shearnman & Sterling attorney Dr. Kai-Uwe Steck reviewed existing German legal treatment of hedge funds. Eibinger, Hoss & Prussen partner Jacques Elvinger outlined the transactions which hedge funds may enter into under Luxembourg law.

An afternoon roundtable including the speakers mentioned above, plus Prof. Theodor Baum and Sullivan & Cromwell partner John O’Brien addressed the regulatory options to protect ordinary investors from the risks of hedge funds. Prof. Andreas Cahn pointed out the inadequacy of disclosure where investors fail to heed the warnings. Prof. Franklin Edwards advanced a "growth-to-decline" strategy to stifle market forces. John O’Brien explained that the corporate lawyer is only able to ensure disclosure of the information his client is willing to provide. Dr. Edgar Wallach of Henzerger & Mueller contributed to a lively debate on the current state of the new draft law of the German Finance Ministry.

As well, in the course of the academic year, a number of special lectures were held for ILF students. These included Dr. Dieter Glüder of the Kreditanstalt für Wiederaufbau on the "Economic and Legal Aspects of Securitization." Rainer Raulof of Deutsche Bank on "Share buybacks as a tool for Capital Management." Dr. Marc Ruck of Flick Gocke Schaumburg on "International Corporate Tax Law."

In addition, the ILF hosted a lecture series and talks by individual guest lecturers. Leading representatives of the German Finance Ministry (Bundesministerium der Finanzen: Bundesanstalt für Finanzmarktaufsicht (BaFin)), the Liechtenstein Market Regulatory Authority (BAFA) gave their insights into regulatory issues with a series of lectures that ran from October 2002 until July 2003. Topics included the optimal structure for financial markets and a balanced approach to their regulation, the supervision of market manipulation, measures against money laundering in the EU, the financing of international terrorism, the changing EU internal market for investment funds, and the implications of the Basel II capital adequacy rules for EU companies.

On December 16, 2002, Prof. Bob Wessels of the University of Amsterdam presented a lecture on EU Insolvency Law.

On June 4 and 5, 2003, Prof. Kenneth E. Scott, of Stanford University Law School, spoke as a Commerzbank Guest Lecturer on corporate governance scandals in the United States and the details surrounding the downfall of Enron Corp. and WorldCom Inc.

The ILF also published a series of working papers to allow the academic and the financial community to air their thoughts on a number of financial and regulatory issues. The Working Papers include papers presented by some of the lecturers discussed above. The following Papers have been released to date:

WP 1: Andreas Cahn: Verwaltungsverfahren der Bundesanstalt für Finanzdienstleistungsaufsicht im Übernahmericht und Rechtschutz Betroffener

WP 2 Avel Navaith: Rahmenbedingungen für den Finanzplatz Deutschland. Ziele und Aufgaben der Politik. insbesondere des Bundesministeriums der Finanzen

WP 8 Regima Nößner: Kursveränderungen - Kursrelevanz und im Verhältnis zur Finanzierung von Unternehmen

WP 10 Ashley Koves: Should Hedge Fund Products be Marketed to Retail Investors? A Balancing Act for Legislators

At the conclusion of the official ceremony, President Steinberg presented each student with a certificate of achievement commending their work in pursuit of the LL.M. Finance degree. Upon successful completion of all examinations and a Masters Thesis by October 2003, each student will receive his or her final degree.

A student representative, Mr. Jan de Boerd, then presented the students' award for the "Lecturer of the Year" to Prof. Paul Bernd Spann of the University’s Faculty of Business and Economics. Dr. De Boerd expressed his personal satisfaction in seeing the first class meet its goals.

The ILF Celebrates the Graduating Class of 2003

The ILF held a dinner reception for the graduating class of 2003 at the University’s Guest House on July 23, 2003. The event marked the students’ completion of academic course requirements prior to the writing of a Master’s Thesis to complete the Program.

In a festive ceremony, students, ILF faculty and sponsors gathered to hear greetings from University President Prof. Rudolph Steinberg, Hesse Finance Minister Karl-Heinz Weimar, ILF Board of Trustees Chairman Prof. Bernd Fahlhofer, and ILF Director Prof. Andreas Cahn.

University President Prof. Steinberg welcomed the students and explained that the ILF fits in with Frankfurt University’s tradition as an academic institution founded with generous support from prominent civic leaders and businessmen.

Finance Minister Weimar expressed the ongoing support of the government of Hesse to the ILF, and to the planned construction of the new House of Finance that will house both the ILF and the Center for Financial Studies.

Prof. Fahlhofer expressed his personal satisfaction in seeing the first class complete their course study. He recalled that it had been a bold venture to decide on the creation and sponsoring of a pioneering new public private partnership integrating the study of law and finance. He noted that it is easy to argue for the financing of an ongoing institution or university, but it is risky to finance an entirely new idea. Looking over the assembled students, he added that the decision was clearly correct.

Another key contribution of the ILF Sponsors is time. As discussed above, many of the ILF’s sponsors are leaders in their respective fields and business leaders. Some sponsors have provided valuable time to teach seminars and lectures to ILF students. Others have provided financial assistance to students. A number of other banks and law firms have provided tuition scholarships for qualified ILF students.

The ILF is pleased to acknowledge the support of the following distinguished sponsors:

Building an International Network

In May of 2003, ILF Director Prof. Cahn met with representatives of leading law schools and law firms in New York to discuss the ILF, international collaboration and possible exchange programs. One result was to invite U.S. awareness and interest in the ILF’s LL.M. Finance Program.

Prof. Cahn presented the ILF and its curriculum in a speech to the American International Law Association, stressing that his conversations with senior lawyers had convinced him that the completion of an LL.M. Finance in Europe would increase a young lawyer’s attractiveness to leading U.S. law firms with an international practice.

Prof. Cahn spoke with members of the law faculties of New York University and Columbia University, among others. The agenda included the possible creation of a U.S.-German exchange program in which ILF students would participate in a Masters of Law program in New York and U.S. law students would have an opportunity to participate and receive an LL.M Finance from the ILF. Prof. Cahn’s meetings will be the presence of a New York faculty member in Frankfurt as a guest lecturer during the 2003/2004 academic year.

A Network of Sponsors

Generous sponsors from the public and private sectors provide the ILF with most of its funding. The University of Frankfurt created an endowment to establish the ILF. Dresdner Bank AG sponsors a permanent chair for its Director. Commerzbank AG has set up a fund that will allow the ILF to invite leading international academics to act as guest professors for the ILF over the next six years. Deutsche Bank through its Foundation fund provides additional funding for an endowed chair, and the Fund's current endowed fund to up and maintain the collection of books in ILF’s library.

Beyond serving as a teaching institution, the ILF is also designed to act as an intellectual forum for financial issues. To this end, the Federal Ministry of Finance (Bundesministerium der Finanzen - BMF) has agreed to an ongoing series of rounds of discussions on important issues of financial market policy. The lectures are attended by students, academics, and members of the financial community, in particular representatives of ILF students.

Another key contribution of the ILF Sponsors is time. As discussed above, many of the ILF’s sponsors are leaders in their respective fields and business leaders. Some sponsors have provided valuable time to teach seminars and lectures to ILF students. Others have provided financial assistance to students. A number of other banks and law firms have provided tuition scholarships for qualified ILF students.
The ILF as a Forum for Ideas

In addition to educating post-graduate students, the ILF is also designed to serve as a forum for discussing ideas affecting law and finance. During the 2002/2003 academic year, the ILF hosted alone and with partners a number of successful conferences and lectures addressing financial, regulatory and corporate matters.

On March 6, 2003, the ILF hosted a conference sponsored by Dresdner Bank entitled “The Future of Frankfurt as a Financial Center” and attended by more than 450 students, university faculty and business community. The conference provoked a lively debate between five of Germany’s leading experts on financial issues with journalists representing major newspapers and broadcast journalists in attendance.

Among the prominent speakers were University President Prof. Rudolf Steinberg, who reviewed Frankfurt’s historical role as an international financial center. Prof. Steinberg pointed out how the creation of the ILF continues this tradition as a major, positive development in Frankfurt’s educational infrastructure for financial issues. German Minister of Finance Hans Eichel used the occasion to unveil details of the Government’s proposed 2006 Financial Market Promotion Act. Dresdner Bank Chairman Prof. Bernd Fahrlah also introduced private-sector proposals to strengthen Frankfurt’s standing as a leading financial center.

On May 22, 2003, the ILF and the Deutschen Akademie (DIA) co-hosted a conference entitled “Hedge Funds: Risks and Regulations,” which was attended by more than 200 students, university faculty and members of the financial and business community. The conference addressed the increased use of hedge funds in the bear market since 2001, and the regulatory challenges that such funds present. The conference also played an important role in alerting the concerns related to hedge funds while such important jurisdictions as Germany, the United Kingdom, and the United States contemplate and prepare the introduction of new hedge fund legislation.

ILF Director Prof. Andreas Cahn and DIA Chairman Prof. Rudiger von Gasse presented a plenary overview of developments in the German financial markets and their regulation. UBS-Waldburg division head Alexander Imchen explained the nature of hedge funds and their advantages for investors. Columbia University’s Prof. Frank Edwards set forth the specific risks that hedge funds present and outlined his ideas for their regulation.

UK Financial Services Authority member Ashley Kowas described the risks in selling hedge fund products to individual investors and sketched the UK regulatory framework for hedge funds. Siebenex & Pliimann partner Maria Cahnack explained why and how U.S. regulatory authorities are currently “waking up” to hedge funds. Schreiner & Sterling attorney Dr. Kai-Uwe Steck reviewed existing German legal treatment of hedge funds. Elsner, Hess & Prussen partner Jacques Elvinger outlined the transactions which hedge funds may enter into under Luxembourg law.

An afternoon roundtable including the speakers mentioned above, plus Prof. Theodor Baum and Sullivan & Cromwell partner John O’Brien addressed the regulatory options to protect ordinary investors from the risks of hedge funds. Prof. Andreas Cahn pointed out the inadequacy of disclosure where investors fail to heed the warnings. Prof. Frank Edwards advocated “regulation light” in order not to stifle market forces. John O’Brien explained that the corporate lawyer is only able to ensure disclosure of the information his client is willing to provide. Dr. Edgar Wallach of Hengeler Mueller contributed to a lively debate on the current state of the new draft law of the German Finance Ministry.

As well, in the course of the academic year, a number of special lectures were held for ILF students. These included Dr. Dieter Glüder of the Kreditanstalt für Wiederaufbau on the “Economic and Legal Aspects of Securitization;” Rainer Raudeler of Deutsche Bank on “Share buybacks as a tool for Capital Management;” Dr. Marc Nuss of Fitch Gooch Schuhmung on “International Corporate Governance,” and members of the financial and business community. The conference provoked a lively debate between five of Germany’s leading experts on financial issues with journalists representing major newspapers and broadcast journalists in attendance.

The ILF also published a series of working papers to allow the academic and professional communities to study fund management, as well as the legal and regulatory issues. The Working Papers include papers presented by some of the lecturers discussed above. The following Papers have been released to date:

WP 1: Andreas Cahn

Internships

In December 2002, the Frankfurt Chamber of Commerce and Industry, Industrie- und Handelskammer (IHK), organized an internship fair (Praktikumsbörse) to give ILF students an opportunity to meet with the ILF sponsors who wanted to take on an intern. The event took place at the IHK and was an all-day affair. The resulting internship placements were gratifying for both students and sponsors, as a high number of internships, some of which led to lasting relationships, well testified.
